

CALL FOR PROPOSALS!

Just Food? Forum on Labor Across the Food System

A collaboration of the Harvard Law School Food Law Society and Harvard Food Literacy Project. Cosponsored by the Food Law and Policy Clinic of Harvard Law School.

Saturday, April 1, 2017 ■ Harvard Law School

Submissions Due: January 23th, 2017

Does your work connect to food and labor? Are you studying the players in our food system, and how their roles and rights have changed over time? The Harvard Just Food Forum seeks proposals that focus on all aspects of labor across the food system. You may be working in the tomato fields in Florida, studying worker ownership models or making a film about fair labor practices—we're interested in hearing from you. We especially encourage proposals from players who can speak from their own experiences, alongside advocates, film makers, and academics. We are seeking two different types of proposals:

- Concurrent sessions: Workshop, talk or panel format to educate and share research and knowledge of a topic and spark conversation and ideas.
- Posters and exhibits: Scholars and entrepreneurs are invited to showcase their work.

Potential Topics

- Agricultural labor
- Food service/ restaurant labor
- Labor rights and inequality
- Food entrepreneurs
- Labeling and certifications
- Regulatory responses to labor issues
- Role of media
- Models of food labor and ownership (e.g. cooperative, non-profit, corporate social responsibility)
- Prison farm labor
- Impact of technology
- Suggest your own!

Please submit your proposal at: <https://goo.gl/forms/o9RLW9RA1CNpRAJi1>

Contact harvard.justfood@gmail.com with questions.